Ancient Future performs in Ukiah

Ancient Future the trendsetting group that performs what has become known as world fusion music, will exhibit their multicultural blend of exotic sounds onstage at Ukiah Playhouse at 8 p.m. on Friday, September 30.

The group combines African, Balinese, Indian, Middle Eastern and South American percussion with European harmonies, Eastern and Western melodies and jazz-rock improvisations. They have performed their compositions at New York City's Carnegie Recital Hall and San Francisco's Great American Music Hall.

Their music is representative of the cultural confluence that exists today. It attempts to stay one step ahead of what is already happening in the philosophical parallel between global consonance and world peace.

The group, which was formed in 1978, has released five CDs. It is led by guitarist Matthew Monfort, recipient of the Louis Armstrong Jazz Award and named Colorado Outstanding Young Guitarist in 1976.

Tickets are available at Coffee, Tea 'N Spice and Mendocino Book Company in Ukiah or at the Ukiah

Players Theatre box office at 1041 Low Gap Road. For reservations call 462-9226.

Monfort is scheduled to conduct a workshop for musicians the day after the performance. For information call 462-4094.
